Types of Home Additions

The professional contractors at Mastercraft Construction & Remodeling can help you create beautiful, customized room additions to meet the needs of your family. Whether you're adding a nursery, a mother-in-law suite, a bathroom, a dining area, or a home office, we've got you covered. Our team has the skills and expertise to construct various types of home additions, such as:

Bump Outs

If you'd like just a bit more space in a specific area of your home or you're looking for an inexpensive option, then a bump out might be your best bet.

A bump out is created by extending a room out by several feet. When you look at the exterior of the home, the new addition juts out a bit beyond the original walls, which is where the term "bump out" comes from.

This type of addition would be perfect if your family would like to have a dining area added to the kitchen or you want enough space in your master bathroom to install a tub.

All we'd have to do is add the necessary space by extending the exterior wall – a simple, effective, and affordable solution!

Full Additions

The most common way our customers increase the area of their homes is through complete room additions; this type of renovation can dramatically increase your home's footprint.

A full addition is what you'll need if you're wanting to add a new bedroom, living room, or nursery. Complete room additions are a great way to create the home of your dreams without the hassle of moving. The only limitations are the size of your lot and your budget

Remodels

Believe it or not, it's possible to increase the amount of space in your home without adding on a single inch. This can be accomplished through a remodel.

Let's say your home was built in the 40s and its floorplan is very closed off with lots of little rooms here and there. You can redesign the layout and open up the space by removing the divider that separates the kitchen, living room, and dining room.

Or try creating a large master bedroom with an attached bathroom by combining two smaller rooms. You can drastically change the look and feel of your home by knocking down a few walls to create a more open floor plan.

Conversions

Another creative way to add space to your home is to take an area that's used infrequently and convert it to useable living space. This type of project works best with rooms such as attics, garages, and basements.

For example, Mastercraft Construction & Remodeling could transform your attached garage into a family room. Or have your attic remade into a home office. Or perhaps your unfinished basement needs a make-over so it can serve as an in-law suite. There are lots of possibilities!

Sunrooms

Everyone could use a little more light in their lives. And what better way to get it than through a new custom-built sun room?

Sunrooms are a very popular way for local homeowners to add space and light to their living space. They're considered an excellent place to relax, take in a bit of nature, and soak in some vitamin D without ever stepping foot outside.

Sunrooms are also a great place to grow plants. If you have a bit of a green thumb but can't seem to find any space near a window to place your plants, then these home additions would be perfect for you.
